at Bonn yesterday reposes the determination of the Vestern allies to inaugurate era in Western Ministers of tho France and West Germany is noteworthy in a number of respects. Primarily it brings to an end the occupation of Germany by the three Western powers, but dovetailed into it is the creation of a European participation in which West Germany is pledged. The negotiations lending up to yesterday's agreement have been, of necessity, protracted, for they have involved a number of delicate and complicated issues, while It has been essential to overcome some fears and prejudices existing in the minds of the signatories, France, in particular, has not found it easy, to subscribe to all the terms of the pact; she suspected German nation attempt to make use of in

SEDITION

"The defendants were in effect never properly before the Court, the warrants for arrest were illegal, and proceedings which followed thereon were a nullity," claimed Mr Leo d'Almada, QC, when he opened an appeal this morning at the Supreme Court before the Full Court of Appeal against the conviction of the publisher and editor of the Ta Kung Pao on charges of sedition.

Mr d'Almada said that when information was laid a certificate was issued by the Registrar and that certificate must then be produced to a judge who could issue a warrant for apprehension of the accused. In this case, declared Counsel, the Crown had gone wrong by producing the certificate before a magistrate instead of a judge.

Bonn Govt Pledges To Aid West Berlin

Bonn, May-26.

The West German Government, in a special declaration today, pledged the fullest possible support for West Berlin.

The declaration was published five hours before the Allied-German treaty ending the occupation of West Germany was due to be signed here.

It took cognisance of the "special role which Berlin has played for the self-assertion of the free world, and is colled upon to play in future."

Japan is again politically independent but most Japanese industrialists are concerned about the possible future results of her continuing economic dependence on uncortain trado factors in a competitive world.

In the first month of the life of the "new Japan" the Japanese were measuring the task of organising the nation's war-croded economy with its obligation to support a land-hungry population now rising above 85,000,000.

After a decade of unsuccessful imperial adventure Japan has lost much of her once-prosperous world trade. She is left with a distorted economy, starved for capital, handicapped with an out-of-date industrial machine, and completely at the mercy of world business trends.

THE UNIONS

London, May 25. The rebel Socialist, Aneurin Bevan, and other advocates of the "cut-rearmament", policy in the Labour Party are fighting a battle for their point of view within the powerful trades unions.

Whether Mr Bevan will be able to influence the Party's next policy-making conference in October depends on the attitude taken by the great industrial battalions beforehand.

Mr Bevan, 54-year-old elequent Welsh leftwinger, has plunged the Labour Party into a soothing internal crisis since he resigned from the last Labour Government a year ago over the rearmament issue. He claims Britain is spending too much on defence and sacrificing her living standards.

Let's not fook at the result for a moment. Consider the bidding, for maybe it will indicate the killing opening lead. North's double of one heart shows length in hearts and, almost surely, shortness in diamonds. North would not be in a hurry to double a bid of only one heart if he had length in his partner's suit. South's hid of one spade shows shortness in hearts. Otherwise he would stand for the double of one heart. The rest of the bidding in-dicates that both pariners have tength in spades.

In short, the bidding tells you that each pariner has trumps and that each is short in a different side suit. Obviously, declarer will plan to cross-ruff the hand, Just on obvious, the best defence is to lead trumps at every opportunity. West had opened a trump, East would have taken two trumps and led a third round. South would then struggle desporately, but he would eventually win only eight tricks.

ENGLAND AGAINST INDIA AT

London, May 25. Len Hutton, the Yorkshire professional an lopening batsman and first choice for England for many seasons, is to captain England in the first cricket Test against India beginning at Lee is on June 5. He is the first professional to be invited to captain an England side, though there have been instances of professionals taking over from injured or sick captains. Norman Yardley, Hutton's County captain, who is Chairman of the England selectors, announced the appointment in the following official statement after a meeting at Nottingham today.
